

Mile High Shift

This spring, as part of the Colorado Department of Transportation’s Central 70 Project, eastbound and westbound I-70 will move from the existing viaduct into the future westbound lanes of I-70 in the lowered section between Brighton and Colorado boulevards.

Heading eastbound, I-70 motorists can expect a gradual decline into the lowered section from Brighton Boulevard to approximately Purina. Then, I-70 will level out and gradually incline back to its current elevation by the time motorists reach Colorado Boulevard.

This switch will have motorists traveling under part of the future cover park between Columbine and Clayton streets. Once the Mile High Shift is completed, demolition of the viaduct will begin and continue through the fall.
